Tech Tip:

Many of us are using smart TVs or media players to enjoy online streaming. Often when customers are having problems with these devices not working well it can be traced back to 2 possible problems. If your TV or media player is connected wirelessly to your router, you may not be getting a good enough connection to stream video or software. Or, your TV or media player may be out of date and needs a new firmware version installed. Most TVs and media players have a way to check for updates, and some will do it automatically. This is something you should do on a regular basis.
